

Adejardo Francisco da Silva Filho (afsf@ufpe.br)

Adejardo in field work in Australia with Ian Williams (ANU).

Master of Science thesis (1982): Petrologia e Geoquímica do batólito de Salgueiro, Pernambuco (advisor: Prof. A.N. Sial)

He holds a Ph.D. degree from the Imperial College of Science and Technology and currently is a full professor at the Department of Geology, Federal University of Pernambuco. His research interests include crustal evolution of NE Brazil and its connection with the West Africa geology; research on geology and petrology of granites; network with geologists who research West Gondwana. Specialties: crustal evolution of Precambrian areas, and research on source areas for sedimentary basins, using U–Pb and Nd systematics; geochemistry and petrology of granites.